Titan Lenders Corp Launches Mortgage Industry Insights Blog

Recognized industry professionals focus on regulatory issues, best practices, lending quality

(March 6, 2008) Denver, CO – Titan Lenders Corp., a mortgage back office fulfillment services provider specializing in closing, funding, and post closing services, has launched its mortgage industry insights blog at <http://titanlenderscorp.com/blog>. The blog, featuring commentary on myriad current issues, including industry trends, best practices, ethics and legislation, has been launched to provide information and innovative thinking for mortgage industry professionals, analysts and media.

“The mortgage industry is in need of fresh thinking and out-of-the-box approaches,” says Mary Kladde, founder and president of Titan Lenders Corp. “We believe that a marketplace of ideas will increase understanding across the industry concerning best practices, innovative solutions and optimal outcomes.”

By addressing critical issues that have led to this point, industry professionals can combine their expertise to prevent or minimize the impact of a similar meltdown in the future, she added

The blog is authored by Kladde, a recognized industry expert in process efficiency, quality control and best practices in fulfillment and back office operations, and Ruth Lee, the company’s legislative liaison and vice president of sales. Topics cover both high profile industry issues, such as the subprime fallout and current levels of decreased investor and homebuyer confidence, as well as less known but critical elements to lending accuracy, efficiency and compliance. RSS feed subscriptions are available, and the blog is open to user feedback, questions and commentary.

“Our hope is that by establishing an honest and open dialogue about the issues that affect our industry, we can prevent future erosions of standards and processes,” says Ruth Lee. “In addition, by explaining changing regulations, laws and standards in a way that everyone can understand, we can help fellow professionals both improve their own processes and understand the regulatory and economic factors driving our industry.”
